NEIGHBORHOOD DINER

Tasty home-style food at The Diner

REVIEW

MENU

There's a wide range of diner-type offerings. We went for breakfast and the choices there were numerous, from the healthy to, well, perhaps not so healthy but very tasty.

ATMOSPHERE

It's called The Diner. That about says it all. Casual, comfortable.

OUR FAVORITE FOOD/PRICE

My wife and I chose Christmas Eve morning to visit for breakfast. We ordered eggs Benedict ($8.55), country-fried steak and eggs ($8.95), a side order of fruit ($2.50), coffee ($1.75) and apple juice ($2.25). The eggs Benedict came with three eggs on English muffins with a slightly lemony tasting sauce that my wife adored, and wonderful country potatoes. (The potatoes are not to miss – crisp outside, soft inside.) The steak was large, and with a healthy portion of eggs and grits and a wonderful biscuit. We had no complaints about anything, but the eggs Benedict would be our first choice next time we go.

REASON TO GO

Good, home-style food; large portions; good prices. Don't go for dinner – they are only open for breakfast and lunch.

SERVICE

We were in a corner out of the way and did not see our server much, but we didn't really need anything either.

NOISE LEVEL

It was quiet. We were in a corner near a side door, but the rest of the room seemed quiet as well.

KID FRIENDLY

Yes, there are plenty of items on the menu that kids will like, and it's a casual atmosphere.
